Profile

David E. Worley focuses his practice on complex civil litigation defense, including the defense of public entities, contractors, other businesses, and individuals against a variety of lawsuits. Mr. Worley has defended his clients against claims of personal injury, construction defect, complex-causation property damage, and product defect, to name a few. In addition to defense work, Mr. Worley occasionally represents plaintiffs in a variety of matters. Prior to joining Scheer & Zehnder, Mr. Worley worked at a small personal injury firm, representing plaintiffs for all manner of injuries.

Mr. Worley graduated cum laude from Seattle University School of Law. During law school, Mr. Worley clerked a labor law firm, where he gained extensive experience in labor and employment disputes, particularly those involving collective bargaining issues. Mr. Worley received undergraduate degrees from the University of Washington and Washington State University. During his time at the University of Washington, Mr. Worley competed with the rowing team, where he went undefeated and won a national championship.

In his free time, Mr. Worley enjoys being in the outdoors, playing all types of sports, and running with his dog.
